Christmas Concert Is Slated for Sunday

The annual MSU Christmas Concert, scheduled for Sunday at 8:15 p.m. in the University Theater, will commemorate the 10th anniversary of the construction of the Music Building and the 25th anniversary of the music department's first accreditation by the National Association of Schools of Music.

Classes will be shortened Friday afternoon for the annual Christmas Convocation at 2:30 in the University Theater.

One o'clock classes will meet from 1:30-1:45; two o'clock classes will meet from 1:55-2:30; three o'clocks from 3:40-4:15 and four o'clocks from 4:25-5 p.m.

The MSU music department has had accreditation since the late Dean John Crowder applied for accreditation in 1938. As the only music department accredited in Montana—and one of the few in the entire Northwest—it has long possessed national recognition, according to Charles W. Bolen, Dean of the School of Fine Arts.

Eric Fiedler Sentence Is Suspended

RYEGATE (AP) — Eric Fiedler, 20, of Missoula changed his plea to guilty to an involuntary manslaughter charge yesterday and was given a one-year suspended prison sentence.

Fiedler, a Montana State University student and son of Leslie Fiedler of the MSU faculty, was charged in connection with the deaths of two other students, Katherine Ann McMillan of Billings and Norman Boyce of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Fiedler withdrew his previous plea of innocent and was handed the suspended sentence. He will be on probation for one year.

Fiedler also pleaded guilty in justice court to driving with a lapsed driver's license and was fined $25. That charge was filed as a result of the accident investigation.

CRITIC OF MARTIN LUTHER KING—The Rev. Uriah J. Fields, above, is scheduled to speak tomorrow evening in the Music Auditorium. His appearance is being sponsored by the Missoula Speakers Bureau. Mr. Fields has accused the Rev. King of having Communist leanings. Mr. Fields resigned his position with the Montgomery Improvement Association after accusing Mr. King of trying to accept money from a Communist front organization.

"This record attests to the quality achieved by Dean Crowder and continued by Luther A. Richman of the music faculty, who served as fine arts dean from 1952 to 1962," Dean Bolen commented. "A quarter of a century of accreditation is also a tribute to the people in Montana since the real measure of any school is its graduates. The music department boasts a large number of distinguished alumni in professional and in important teaching positions all over the United States."

The dean said that MSU's recognition by the National Association of Schools of Music brings it into the main stream of music education trends in the country. Since World War II, colleges and universities have assumed a growing part in the musical training of American youth.

Earlier, the dean added, talented students generally had to attend a conservatory or go to Europe for musical training. The addition of professional music curricula to college and university offerings has made a significant mark on American education, he said.

"The effect of university general studies on music students has been welcomed by music education leaders," Dean Bolen said. "Conversely, the influence of music schools on the universities has been in large part responsible for the 'cultural explosion' that has seen a tremendous increase in attendance at musical programs and in the purchase of recordings. This renaissance in music has resulted in the music industry being among the 10 largest in the United States."

GRADUATING SENIORS SEE MISS VAN DUSER

All seniors who hope to graduate at the end of this quarter are to see Cyrile Van Duser at the Photo-Sentinel Office this week.

Miss Van Duser, who is preparing stories for home town newspapers, said that seniors who do not wish a story to appear in their home town paper should let her know.

U Traffic Rule Is Changed To Reduce Fine

A change in campus traffic regulations was announced by Bonnie Kositzky, ASMSU business manager, at the Central Board meeting last week.

The change reduces the fine for failure to register a motor vehicle from $10 to $3.

Article C under number 7 of the motor vehicle regulations reads: "A penalty of $3 will be levied for failure to register a motor vehicle, purposeful falsification of registration or failure to affix a decal in the prescribed manner, provided the driver can legally operate a motor vehicle."

A person who can "legally operate a motor vehicle" at MSU must have 40 credits, be a licensed driver and have a 2.0 grade point average.

Every student is given a set of the motor vehicle regulations at registration, according to Miss Kositzky.

Copies of the regulations are available in Room 216 at the Field House.

Vandals Deface Autos Belonging to U Officials

By JIM CRANE
Kaimin Reporter

Vandals sprayed paint on cars belonging to Maurine Clow, associate dean of students, and Joan Hodgson, head counselor of women's residence halls, during the weekend.

Miss Clow's car was sprayed both Friday night and sometime Sunday. Miss Hodgson's car was painted Friday night.

Written in copper-colored paint on both cars were the words, "Sex is fun." The word "virginity" was written on the side of Miss Hodgson's car.

The Missoula Police Department reported that it has no definite leads as to the vandals' identity, but they have talked with one person who thinks he knows who was responsible.

Miss Clow said that both times her car was painted it was parked in her garage. Miss Hodgson's car was parked behind Eloise Knowles Hall.

Miss Clow said she didn't park her car in the garage until 12:30 a.m. Saturday. Miss Hodgson reported that a resident dorm official noticed her car had been painted at 2 a.m. of the same morning.

Miss Clow had the paint removed from her car Saturday. She said the second painting could have occurred any time Sunday afternoon.

When asked if she thought the vandalism had anything to do with the campus campaign to ease women's social restrictions, Miss Hodgson answered:

Editorial

Anonymous Painters, Part II

The Kaimin has run three front-page editorials in the last two quarters. Two of them were "get out and vote" plugs. The other was accompanied by a picture showing a paint-despoiled poster advertising a public lecture sponsored by the Young Americans for Freedom.

It is with weary sadness that we again take to page one to deplore another clandestine paint job. The childish splashes of "sex is fun" (see above) on the cars of Maurine Clow, associate dean of students, and Joan Hodgson, head counselor of women's residence halls, betray only a Neanderthalian mentality and a vicious irresponsibility. For more on this, see editorial on page two.

Coed Groups Will Serenade Men With Christmas Carols

University men living on campus will be serenaded by members of women's dormitories and sororities singing Christmas carols tonight.

Women from the six sororities and from four independent living groups on campus will begin caroling at 7 p.m.

Songs which will be sung are "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer" (AP), "Carol of the Drum" (DDD), "When Christmas Morn Is Dawning" (DG), "Silent Night" (KAT), "Jesus Bambino" (KKG), "What Child Is This" (SK), "Christmas Song" and "Christmas in Kilarney" (Knowles Hall), "Silent Night (Brantly Hall), "Winter Wonderland" (Corbin Hall) and "Joy to the World" (Synadelphic House).

Turner Hall will be the first men's living group to be serenaded.

The women will then continue spreading Christmas spirit to Craig Hall, Elrod Hall, the Alpha Tau Omega House, Pres. Robert Johns' house and the Newman House.

Members of Delta Sigma Phi, Sigma Nu, Phi Sigma Kappa, Sigma Chi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Theta Chi and Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity houses also will be serenaded.

The women will end their caroling tour by singing to Maurine Clow, associate dean of students, and to members of Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

The Christmas caroling is sponsored by Panhellenic, the governing body of campus sororities.

"It could be. I never had anything like this happen before."

Andrew C. Cogswell, dean of students, termed the incident "pretty regrettable."

"I wouldn't expect it of University students," Dean Cogswell said.

ASMSU Pres. Rick Jones made this statement:

"I am alarmed and distressed that students at Montana State University would resort to such malicious activity."

"Students at MSU should think twice before they take action such as this. They only hurt themselves and the University community. This is our institution and we are represented by what we do in it."

"The action that was taken places a stigma on the entire student body. This can serve to harm the campaign on social restrictions."

"Through student government and Central Board we have attempted in a responsible way to achieve relaxation of social regulations for women. These goals can only be gained when the students show they can behave in a responsible manner."

"In no way has student government wanted to work with a hostile attitude toward the deans. The only way these problems can be solved is to sit down and work them out."

"If students feel hostility toward the Dean's office they should come to the student government so that their complaints can be run through the proper channels," Jones concluded.

Dean to Discuss Women's Rules

Discussions on social regulations are in full swing this week with Maurine Clow, associate dean of students, scheduled to speak to a group of women at Corbin Hall and a meeting of the Student Life committee scheduled for 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Miss Clow will speak to approximately 20 upper-class women tonight at 10:30. Corbin Hall spokesmen said they were hoping that she would speak to other groups of Corbin women at a later date.

Bob Worcester, chairman of the Student Life Committee, said his group will meet this week and may make some changes in the resolution the committee submitted to Central Board last week.

He said the changes will be for the purpose of clarification of the resolution.

The committee has a meeting with Andrew C. Cogswell, dean of students, and Miss Clow tentatively scheduled for Jan. 8, Worcester said.

Music School Plans Program

A program of chamber music for wind ensembles will be presented tonight at 8:15 in the Music Recital Hall. No admission will be charged.

Woodwind ensembles comprised of MSU students will be directed by William Manning and David Whitwell, members of the music school staff.

The woodwind quintet will present Mozart's "Quintet, K. 452" and Hayden's "Divertimento."

The brass choir will feature Beethoven's "Three Equals," Andre Spirea's "Music for Brass" and Karol Rathaus' "Tower Music."

The clarinet choir will perform Karl Stamitz's "Andante" and Mozart's "Impressario Overture."

A Gesture in Reparation

We hesitate to link University students with this, the painting of the cars of Maureen Clow, associate dean of students, and Joan Hodgson, women's residence head counselor.

However, University students—familiar as they are with the current social restrictions discussion on campus—probably did the deed. (See page 1 picture and editorial comment.)

Despite the unquestionable fact that only a few non-thinkers perpetrated the vandalism, every student automatically comes under an uncomfortable kind of suspicion, particularly those students who have spoken out against the social regulations. This is unfortunate, but true.

This vandalism by no means changes the Kaimin's opinion that the social restrictions can and should be improved, but we believe that such pointless and destructive tactics are unwarranted and self-defeating.

Also, the vandalism may cause no little expense for both Miss Clow and Miss Hodgson, if their cars need to be repainted. Last night the Kaimin sounded out several individuals and living groups at random, asking them to contribute to a collection to help defray any costs if repainting is needed. Response was gratifying. By 7:30 last night two fraternities and several individuals had obligated themselves for varying amounts should the need arise and should Miss Clow and Miss Hodgson be willing to accept such voluntary contributions.

We do not intend that this should become a campus-wide charity drive, for we are aware that both Miss Clow and Miss Hodgson are able to pay their own bills. However, this voluntary action should accomplish at least two things: (1) remove any stigma from the student body as a whole and (2) serve as a declaration that, while students and deans sometimes may not agree on an issue, neither side should resort to any kind of personal attack on the other side in futile attempt to prove a point.

Says Overseas Institute Is Misleading

To the Kaimin:

It was indeed discouraging to read in the Kaimin of Dec. 3 the front-page advertising on behalf of the Institute of European Studies. As a student who participated in "Das Deutsche Jahr" program in Freiburg, Germany last year, I consider it my duty to express myself on this program for the benefit of any unknowing students who may be considering participation in it.

The dissatisfaction among the participants was extremely high. What the Institute of European Studies in its clever propagandistic prune-juice spills out is not what it carries out. American students are lumped together in a ghetto in which learning of the language to be studied is greatly hindered. Students are not allowed to select those courses which they may desire and participation of Institute students in activities other than activities planned by the Institute is well nigh impossible. Also despite claims that the Institute is capable of working miracles for your dollar a student can study in Germany for less than the Institute charges.

Owing to the lack of any organized international accrediting agency these various "overseas institutes" and "programs" may exercise any practices which they so desire. There were and are students who will of course defend the Institute because they were chosen to participate in it—but I don't feel so compelled. Last year in Freiburg the troubles surrounding the program were so impossible that the University of Freiburg was forced to look upon the Institute in a new light. I don't feel that an honest individual could really accept college credits from such an organization as the IES. But many Americans do accept these credits and are content to ride along with the scheme in order to realize, even if not academically honest, something for their money.

Discovering the practices of this group to be completely antithetical to my objectives for study in Europe, I found it necessary to enter the University of Freiburg independently—despite threats by the IES director that I was forbidden to do so and would have to return to the United States. In the past any student who would not adhere to the set-up of the IES in all its ghetto-practices was forced to return to the United States because the IES in its "established prestige" was able to convince the various schools that the so-called "rebels" were "undesirable elements." The discontentment last year caused almost twenty percent of the Americans chosen by the Institute to be called "undesirable."

The IES in its effective advertising scheme has been capable of snaring unsuspecting students in the past and will perhaps continue to do so. It is as much the right of students, however, to know what these various "institutes" are not as it is to hear from the "institutes" what their claims are. I should be glad to discuss the IES practices and policies with anyone in so far as I am acquainted with them.

Sophomore, Age 21, Receives Parental 'Vote of Confidence'

(Editor's Note: The following letter was submitted to the office of the Associate Dean of Students Monday of this week. The Kaimin received a photostatic copy of the letter the same day, with permission to print it.)

To Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify that my daughter, Georgia Diane Stratas, enrolled at MSU as a sophomore journalism student, has my full and unreserved permission to live off campus, in whatever type of accommodation she desires, or finds suitable. She also has my full permission to leave the campus at any time, for any purpose whatsoever, such as visiting friends in Missoula or other locations, on weekends, holidays or any other time. She also has full permission to bring home with her, as visitors, anyone, and as many persons as she deems advisable, and at any time.

I feel that having attained the age of 21 in February 1963 and being considered an adult with voting privileges by both Canadian and U.S. governments, she should be afforded adult privileges and responsibilities to the fullest degree, both by her parents, and by Montana State University (Missoula). We feel that morality and good behaviour cannot be legislated or enforced by rigid, inflexi-ble rules, but rather that they are the result of proper upbringing, and the individual's good character and intelligence.

Yours truly,

IN DEFENSE OF LAWS

Question not the wisdom of tradition,
Its rules are just.
Yours letters indicate sedition,
And lack of trust.

Our educated laws were made
By clever men.
The basis of their rules was laid—
The U.S. Pen.

You must admit your cell is nice
And safe at night.
It saves you all from evil vice,
Which is not right.

I don't know why you wish to drive
Those nasty cars.
You're going to have to learn to strive
To like our bars.

Older girls can live elsewhere,
And often try it.
But when they try to cook food
there,
They're on a diet.

The hours you have are meant to save
The virgin girl.
The lecherous wolves do not behave—
Like they were sterile.

You dare not exercise volition
To quench your lust,
Or you will journey to perdition
To Hell or Bust!!

McCaig's Pa Had Little Sayings, Too

To the Editor:

"My pa always told me that when passions run high keep your mouth shut."—Dean Cogswell.

Maurine Clow . . . "said she prefers to talk to individuals or groups of students rather than make a public statement."

My pa had many things to say about people who refused a challenge to explain themselves in public. Unfortunately most of what old pa had to say wasn't very polite.

R. DONALD McCAIG

Pedersen Lauds Student Life Committee

To the Kaimin:

At last some light has broken through the fog over MSU. I am not thinking of the fickle Missoula sun but the Student Life Committee's resolution.

However joyous I am at this news, I wonder if the light will continue to be seen. As anyone who has been at MSU for more than one year knows, the deans of students are good at blowing up a storm when "the little people" get out of line. I hope—not for my sake, for I am free of dorms—that the women who are interested in getting out, "o-u-t, OUT," will not only speak up but howl for their "certain unalienable rights." I believe those who are satisfied with the regulations should say so too. They must admit that they too would not want "the shoe on the other foot." Therefore, it is their duty to agree that the "minority," if such a thing exists in this case, has its rights too.

How's about some concrete reasoning for a change? Take money for instance. It's a subject dear to all of us, especially when we don't have any. I'm saving $100 per quarter, as do my three roommates, in my present apartment. I pay $50 for food, $63.75 for my room, cooking space, lots of study space, quiet, wall-to-wall rugs, beds (that's a dirty word), and $5 to $10 for lights, heat and a private telephone. Get my point? I know many coeds are in the same shape financially as I am; I have talked to many.

As for the prospect of dorms not being filled, I don't think that will be of much worry. Also, if the University "got rid of" those coeds over 21 who wished to move off campus, it would mean that everyone else could be comfortable instead of being stacked like cordwood into rooms just large enough for one, let alone three. No wonder so many girls have "cabin fever." Fewer dorms would have to be built, and the ghost of a new SUB would recede into the background, at least for a little while.

Three factors limit the extent of the coed exodus:

(1) Parental permission for such a move is not that easy to get at our stage of maturity.

(2) There is not a very great surplus of good, comfortable, cheap apartments in Missoula and not every girl has enough money to buy a trailer house.

(3) There are many girls who, though they believe in the Student Life resolution, would not want to leave the social life of the on-campus group even if their parents were agreeable.

All this fuss and furor makes me wonder if the "gods" are listening. Are the ears of our parents and the deans plugged with idealistic notions? Or are they just stalling until we get tired of talking to ourselves and quit? I'd like to see (I know I never will), a statement from each of the deans, Dean Cogswell and Dean Clow, stating in full their positions on the matter. Talk about no student-administration co-operation!

I believe that these poor, mistreated coeds can take care of themselves, and their virtue and integrity. Everyone knows the old saw: "Strong winds make strong trees." If these "trees" are sheltered they will be weak and will become "windfalls" when the first big wind blows up.

Why don't we all get together and conduct a poll of those students involved and their parents. I think that this is the only fair way. Granted, it would take some time to finish, but how else can we receive any true consensus of opinion at all.

Moral and intellectual freedom is every person's responsibility, and our duty is to insure that every coed and student has the right to be wrong. I don't think this coed exodus would bother our morals, but it sure would help coed morale.

In the meantime, keep saying what you think. Maybe someday the stuffy gods of rhyme and reason will fall prey to their own logic and be compelled to do what we all know is right.

Students Facing Discipline Deserve Counsel, Says Professor

To the Kaimin:

I think that Mr. Dunsmore's experience is not indicative of this faculty's sense of responsibility to the student body, though I will admit that the faculty has been woefully remiss in action toward the establishment of more democratic student life. The Department of Botany did, as a minor step, ask the Dean of Students to inform the department before any severe disciplinary action is taken against its students (the obvious response was for us to stick to our teaching). Most advisers would ask for the same privilege, though usually we only receive notification of our students having left school. I, personally, find it very disturbing that at a critical phase of a young person's life he is least likely to encounter an environment which would accustom him to and teach him a purposeful life in which each individual contributes to the best of his ability to the common good. He cannot form judgments of his own, nor is he permitted to express his individuality. Any opportunity for value judgments is eliminated by removal of the questioner or the cause (i.e., lock up the women).

Indeed, students must take the initiative in improving their lot—it's their future. But I do not think that most members of the faculty will, when called upon, aid them in their quest. Radical changes in academia are usually slow in coming but in the meantime I would suggest to students who find themselves under threat of disciplinary action to insist that their adviser, or any other interested faculty member, be consulted in the matter. The right to counsel appears fundamental enough to our society that it could apply even to us.

As to Mr. Dunsmore's conclusion that the Dean of Students decision was justified—I can only disagree. In view of the fact that we deal here with prosecutor and judge all rolled into one, how can any outsider evaluate the facts?

Top Teams Set to Compete In Volleyball Tournament

The top three teams from Fraternity and B Leagues and the top two teams in A League will compete in the intramural volleyball tournament which begins Thursday at 4 p.m. in the Men's Gym.

Last year's volleyball champ, Phi Delta Theta, meets the Daly Dozen, 5-2. PDT is 7-0 this year and is in first place in the fraternity league.

In other games Nocturnals, 7-0, play Sigma Nu, 5-2; Rams, 6-1, meet Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 6-1; and Northlanders, 7-0, play Advocates, 5-2. All of these games are at 4 p.m.

At 5 p.m. the winners of the above games will meet in the semifinals. The championship game will be played at 6 p.m. if the teams so desire. If not it will be played Friday, according to Ed Chinske, director of men's intramurals.

Grizzly Basketball Squad Snowbound, but Victorious

The Montana State University Grizzlies got off the ground higher Friday and Saturday nights than they have been able to since in an airplane.

The Grizzlies took their second and third games of the basketball season from two North Dakota teams.

Friday night the Grizzlies whipped the North Dakota Sioux by a slim two-point margin, 79-77. Saturday the Tips rolled over the North Dakota State Bison 76-51.

The Montana State Bobcats took a 72-60 victory from the North Dakota State Bison Friday night in Grand Forks. Saturday night the Bobcats and Grizzlies traded foes and the Bobcats again won 79-59 in the first game of the evening.

The Grizzly-Sioux game was close all the way with the Tips holding a 42-33 margin at half-time. Sophomore John Quist scored 20 points for team honors in that department. Jim Pramenko was close behind with 19 tallies.

High scorer for the game was Tom Nesbitt of the Sioux, with 30 points.

Saturday night the Bison gave the Grizzlies some tough opposition in the first half, but fell to the wayside in the second half.

At the half, the Grizzlies led by a meager two points, 34-32. Early in the second half the Tips began to pull away, led by Pramenko. The 6-0 guard took game scoring honors with 19 points. He had eight field goals and three free throws.

Coach Ron Nord of the Grizzlies mentioned guards Pramenko and Gary Peck as doing fine jobs on their floor game and Harold Fullerton, Bill Rice and John Quist as doing a good job on the boards.

Nord said, "Three in a row—I can't believe it."

Snowbound in Fargo, N.D., since Saturday, the Grizzly basketball team finally took off for Missoula yesterday—and got as far as Billings.

The team found itself stranded in Billings when mechanical difficulties struck their Johnson Flying Service C-46. If the plane was ready, the team planned to leave for Missoula today at 7:30 a.m., arriving about 9:15.

If the C-46 was still grounded, the team planned on flying home on a commercial plane this morning.

Although the trip was successful for the Tips from the standpoint of games won, it hasn't been so good according to the timetable. Today is the sixth day of the scheduled four-day journey.

U Pistol Teams Place in Match

Two MSU pistol teams took second and fourth places Saturday in the second Invitational Slow Fire match at the MSU firing range.

A local makeshift team composed of policemen and reservists won the match with 963 points. The MSU teams compiled 954 and 827. A four-man team from the Montana National Guard shot a 928 for third place in the 30-round .22 caliber match.

Marvin Hamilton of the Missoula team fired a 279 to lead all individuals. William Chord, MSU, was second with 273.

Other teams scoring were: Montana Highway Patrol, 793; Forest Service, 778; and Army Reserve 687.

MSU Shooters First, Sixth

The MSU rifle team defeated the Victor and Missoula Moose rifle teams in a .22 caliber small bore match Friday night at Victor. Saturday the MSU ROTC team participated in a match won by the University of Utah in the Bengal Trophy match at Pocatello.

The ROTC team placed sixth with 1,826 points in the 12-team match. U of Utah had 1,858.

The MSU team did not come back empty handed. Jan Cure won a silver medal for second place offhand shooting.

In Friday night's match, MSU shooters Robert Clark, John Osborne and Dora Yungdahl fired 290, 283 and 282 for top individual honors.

The MSU teams meet St. Ignace here tomorrow.

Foreign Language Studies Offered During Summer

Summer provides hundreds of opportunities for students and faculty members who wish to further their foreign language studies.

Many schools offer language studies abroad during the summer, while other institutions offer campus study.

These language programs often help students fulfill their language requirements at MSU if they are part of the academic year. Some of the language studies are in the form of an institute and are not accredited, Douglas Sheppard, chairman of foreign languages, said.

MSU has sponsored such institutes in the past. These have been open only to French and Spanish high school teachers. The last institute was in 1962. Plans for a 1964 school teachers of French are being formulated.

UN Described as a Useful Body In Instructor's Speech to Forum

By RAY DOMINICK
Kaimin Reporter

Many Americans believe that the U.N. is Communist-dominated and many Communists believe it is American dominated, C. Barclay Kuhn, instructor of political science, said at Montana Forum last Friday.

Rather than opposing the views of Dr. Arthur R. Kintner, Missoula physician who spoke against the U.N. recently, Kuhn sought to present a different view of the United Nations as he explained it in terms of international relations and how, he believes, it helps to diminish some of the undesirable aspects of the cold war.

Kuhn said "a reasonable argument can be made that the United Nations has about as much chance of eliminating the scourge of war as the U.S. government appeared to have 10 years ago of securing equal rights for Negroes."

He said, "the concept of national sovereignty has always been a legal fiction." Presently, Kuhn said, the Russians control nearly 80 per cent of our national budget by forcing us to spend that much money to protect ourselves from Communism. It is impossible in these days to operate a government without the support and co-operation of other governments, he said.

Mr. Kuhn said you cannot condemn the U.N. for failing to live up to its Charter because the Charter's goals are vague and interpreted in many different ways. A more worthwhile way to examine the U.N., he said, would be in terms of what it has done and the effects it has had.

He noted that the U.N. has helped to speed up the dismantling of the European colonial system; train leaders in the new nations of Africa; offer technical assistance to desiring countries, and has aided in narrowing the gap between rich nations and poor nations.

Mr. Kuhn doubted that the United States would ever be heavily outvoted on major issues because of the fact that it contributes one-third of the organization's funds—about one dollar per person in the United States.

Mr. Kuhn concluded his talk with the remark that "even an institution which can provide only partial and limited solutions to what are otherwise regarded as insoluble problems must be regarded with some degree of approval."

MSU Faculty Members Will Take Winter Quarter Absence Leaves

Four MSU faculty members will take leaves of absence next quarter.

Nan C. Carpenter, professor of English, will spend winter quarter as a Huntington Fellow at the Huntington Library in San Marino, Calif. She plans to work on two books, one on John Skelton, and the other on music in medieval drama.

Douglas Bankson, associate professor of drama, said he will travel with his family, "probably in Mexico." He plans to work on a play during the two quarters he will be gone.

James Munro, associate professor of education, said his one quarter's leave will be busier than most of the quarters he has taught here. Mr. Munro said he will be on campus teaching the professional quarter for the first four weeks. Then, he said, he plans to teach extension courses in schools throughout the state and write a handbook.

Rudy Autio, assistant professor of art, will do creative research in ceramic clay bodies in Italy. Mr. Autio recently received a $1,000 scholarship from the Louis Comfort Tiffany Foundation for some of his work in creative ceramics. (See pg. 4 of Dec. 3 Kaimin.)
